Preface

GENESIS — From Planetary Hypothesis to Drama and Music: “GENESIS” began with a question that belongs simultaneously to science and to the oldest territory of human imagination: how does a lifeless world become a living one?

The work presented here approaches that question through several distinct disciplines. It begins as a scientific hypothesis, develops into a computational model, and then passes into theatre and music. These components are presented together not because their methods are interchangeable, but because they examine the same underlying event through different forms of understanding.

The scientific part proposes and quantitatively explores a specific planetary scenario: a late, Titan-mass volatile-rich impactor encountering the early Earth and potentially contributing to a major environmental reset, volatile delivery, atmospheric transformation, and a post-impact chemical environment relevant to prebiotic chemistry. The accompanying computational framework translates that hypothesis into a sequence of testable reduced-order models, including dynamical screening, impact partitioning, thermal evolution, atmospheric escape, isotope evolution, noble-gas retention, and finite-feedstock chemical calculations.

These calculations do not establish that such an impact occurred, nor should the calibrated parameters of the present reduced-order framework be confused with measurements of the early Earth. They define instead a provisional region of parameter space within which the hypothesis can be examined quantitatively, challenged, refined, or rejected. The scientific paper therefore stands on its own terms: its claims must ultimately be judged by planetary dynamics, geophysics, geochemistry, atmospheric physics, isotope constraints, and higher-fidelity numerical simulation.

From that quantitative investigation, however, another work emerges: The theatrical “GENESIS” takes the same sequence of physical events and translates it into the language of Myth. Earth becomes again “Gaia”; planetary violence assumes the scale of the Titans; “Necessity” becomes both physical law and dramatic power; and “Prometheus” becomes more than the traditional bearer of fire. Within the symbolic architecture of the drama, he approaches the principle of biological continuity itself: the trace that survives the death of one body and is received by another.

This is not offered as scientific evidence; it is a poetic transformation of scientific ideas. The distinction is essential: the scientific paper asks what can be calculated, constrained, falsified, and eventually tested by more sophisticated models; the drama asks what those same processes mean when translated into human language: creation through destruction, order emerging from physical necessity, inheritance overcoming individual mortality, and life arising not outside nature but from within its laws.

Within this dramatic framework, Necessity (“Ananke”) does not imply that the proposed planetary sequence was probable, historically required, or uniquely determined by physical law. The quantitative study instead reveals a narrow and contingent pathway whose realization may have been extraordinarily improbable. The drama names this convergence “Necessity” not because physics guarantees it, but because, once imagined as the path from which the living world emerged, every unlikely contingency becomes an indispensable link in the chain of that world’s existence.

Music provides the final dimension. The score does not merely accompany the text. It gives temporal and emotional form to processes whose natural scales range from seconds of catastrophic impact to tens of thousands of years of planetary cooling and ultimately to geological ages of biological transformation. What appears in the scientific work as energy, temperature, mass transfer, atmospheric loss, chemical transition, and time becomes, in music, tension, density, rupture, silence, recurrence, transformation, and resolution.

The resulting project therefore consists of four connected but methodologically distinct layers:

- The hypothesis asks whether the event could have happened.
- The code asks whether its consequences can be made quantitatively self-consistent.
- The theatrical play asks what such a genesis means.
- The music asks what such a genesis sounds like.

None is intended to substitute for another.

One Question, Several Languages:

The relationship among the separately distributed components is deliberate. Readers who consult the scientific paper encounter the hypothesis without Prometheus, Gaia, the Chorus, an orchestra, or metaphor: as a physical proposition exposed to calculation and eventual falsification. The dramatic and musical work then carries the same material across the boundary into art.

When Prometheus subsequently appears on the stage, he should not retroactively become an argument for the science. When the scientific model describes inheritance, chemistry, or planetary transformation, it should not diminish Prometheus into an equation. The two belong to different systems of truth, yet they can originate in the same act of inquiry.

For millennia, cosmogony belonged principally to Myth, Philosophy, Poetry, and Religion. Modern science gave humanity another language in which to ask how worlds form, how atmospheres change, how molecules organize, and under what conditions matter may cross the extraordinary threshold into life. “GENESIS” deliberately places these languages beside one another without attempting to collapse their differences.

Its subject is therefore larger than a hypothetical impact at approximately 4.1 billion years ago. The impact is the physical point of departure. The deeper subject is transition:

From collision to order;

From fire to water;

From atmosphere to chemistry;

From chemistry to inheritance;

From matter to life;

from physical event to human meaning;

And, finally, from calculation to word and sound.

The scientific model may ultimately survive, change substantially, or be falsified by better evidence. That possibility is intrinsic to the work rather than a threat to it. Science advances by allowing its propositions to fail. However, the artistic question survives independently:

“How does a world become capable of remembering itself?”

“GENESIS” is an attempt to ask that question in every language available to it.

Accompanying material

The theatrical and musical work presented in this document forms part of the wider “GENESIS” project. Its exploratory planetary hypothesis, quantitative formulation, computational methods, numerical experiments, and limitations are documented separately in the accompanying scientific paper and computational repository.

1. Readers who wish to examine the planetary hypothesis independently of its dramatic treatment are encouraged to consult the “GENESIS” scientific paper:

GENESIS — A Hadean Earth Titan-Mass Impact Model

A Quantitative Hypothesis for Earth’s Volatile Budget, Atmospheric Reset, and Post-Impact Prebiotic Chemistry

Download or read the complete paper at the following URL:

<http://www.zenodo.com>

2. The computational framework accompanying the paper provides the code, configuration, calibration history, and numerical outputs used for its reduced-order local screening calculations. It includes the computational stages for delivery screening, impact and volatile partitioning, thermal evolution, atmospheric escape and isotope evolution, noble-gas retention, and post-impact chemistry, together with the archived results of the successive calibration and reproducibility runs discussed in the paper.

View/download the GENESIS computational code at the following GitHub repository:

<https://github.com/ChristosTsirkas/genesis-earth-hadean-titan-impact-model>

The code repository is provided both for transparency and for reproducibility. Readers may inspect the implementation, numerical assumptions, calibrated surrogate parameters, intermediate outputs, and final result matrices rather than relying solely upon the values reported in the manuscript.

3. A rendered realization of the “GENESIS” music score is also available online, allowing the musical component to be heard independently of a staged performance.

The scientific paper and computational material constitute the authoritative record of the project’s scientific claims, assumptions, calculations, and limitations. The play and musical score constitute their independent artistic transformation and are not themselves offered as scientific evidence.

Together, the separately distributed components of “GENESIS” comprise:

- Scientific Paper — the hypothesis, quantitative analysis, results, limitations, and falsifiable predictions.
- Computational Framework — the executable models, calibration history, reproducibility material, and numerical results.
- Theatrical Play / Libretto — the dramatic and mythological transformation of the scientific conception, distributed in this document.

- Musical Score — the musical realization of the dramatic work, distributed in this document.
- Composer Dossier — the complete technical and structural documentation of the 544-verse score, distributed in this document.
- The Music — the rendered realization of the score, available for online listening on SoundCloud.

Each component may be read, examined, performed, or evaluated independently; taken together, they constitute the complete “GENESIS” project.

NECESSITY

103 I did not fashion any bonds at all myself.

~ - ~ - | -- ~ - | -- ~ -

104 I have no will, nor wish to raise a ruling hand;

-- ~ - | -- ~ - | -- ~ -

105 Nor do I judge these deeds as one enthroned by Law.

NECESSITY

DEATH

- 196 I am the shadow, bound to live near a live
 corpse;
 -- ~ - | ~ - ~ - | -- ~ -
- 197 With life itself there came the birth of death for man.
 -- ~ - | ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ -

CHORUS OF NIGHTS

- 198 And now, alas, a twofold gift has reached the
 earth.
 -- ~ - | -- ~ - | x - ~ x

DEATH

- 199 Know this: no grief, no gift: I am the law of
 earth;
 -- ~ - | ~ - ~ - | -- ~ ~
- 200 Suppose the first-born creature never comes to die;
 -- ~ - | -- ~ - | -- ~ -
- 201 Then say, what place for life remains to greet the next?
 ~ - ~ - | -- ~ - | -- ~ ~
- 202 If all that has been born should last throughout
 all time,
 -- ~ - | -- ~ - | -- ~ ~
- 203 The world allows no new-born thing a place to be here.
 -- ~ - | -- ~ - | ~ ~ - ~ ~

SELENE

- 204 And so you open new roads for those who are to come?
 -- ~ - | -- ~ - | ~ ~ - ~ ~

DEATH

- 205 What lives now yields its place; what follows takes its own turn.
 -- ~ - | -- ~ ~ ~ | -- ~ -
- 206 No longer does the world remain a stone bound fast;
 -- ~ - | ~ - ~ - | -- ~ -

207 ἀλλ' ἄλλο γίγνεται δι' ἄλλου θανάτου.

 -- ~ - | -- ~ - | -- ~ -

207 Each newborn thing comes through the death of what came first.

-- ~ - | ~ - ~ - | -- ~ -

208 This is the Fate; and this in turn must come to pass.

~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ - | -- ~ -

CHORUS OF NIGHTS

209 What else have you to tell us now? Is there no more?

~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ -

DEATH

210 No, there is nothing else I need to say as yet.

-- ~ - | ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ ~

NECESSITY

211 All this is well for you; dismiss all further dark thought.

-- ~ - | ~ ~ - ~ - | -- ~ -

EARTH

212 And I myself shall take all bodies back again.

~ - ~ - | -- ~ - | -- ~ -

213 One shall live in the sea, another on the land;

~ - ~ - | -- ~ - | -- ~ ~

214 Another, borne on wings, shall touch the paths
 of air;

~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ - | -- ~ -

215 No birth can ever come to be without decay.

-- ~ - | -- ~ - | -- ~ ~

DEATH

216 For you are both the mother and the tomb of men.

-- ~ - | -- ~ - | -- ~ -

EARTH

217 For all my beings, one source and one same end remain.

- 218 Who could have said unto the Sea,
 219 When first it received a seed of life,
 220 That the law of myriad deaths
 221 Was what it then received?
 222 Who could have addressed the Earth
 223 That, having become a mother,
 224 She would at once become a tomb
 225 For all that she shall rear?
 226 O twofold task, the labour of life:
 227 The one same hand
 228 It opens the womb,
 229 And opens up the tomb.

ANTISTROPHE

EPISODE III

SELENE

- 255 After long silence, I behold this land again.
 -- ~ - | -- ~ - | ~ - ~ -
- 256 I wheel across the heavens, watching all forms
 now change.
 -- ~ - | ~ - ~ ~ ~ | -- ~ -
- 257 The sea, once void of life, now teems with living forms;
 ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ -
- 258 Some breathing things grow wings to course the upper air,
 -- ~ - | -- ~ - | ~ - ~ ~
- 259 While others tread the earth, once barred to mortal feet.
 -- ~ - | -- ~ - | -- ~ ~

EARTH

- 260 And now I'll open land to all my living kinds.
 -- ~ - | -- ~ - | -- ~ -

SELENE

- 261 In truth, what do you say? Shall life forsake the sea?
 -- ~ - | -- ~ - | -- ~ ~

EARTH

- 262 All that is bound desires to see its bonds undone.
 -- ~ - | ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ ~

NECESSITY

- 263 It has no wish; its nature carries it along.
 -- ~ - | ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ -

EARTH

- 264 As though it yearned, by force it travels on its course.

ΑΝΑΓΚΗ

275 σαφῶς μαθεῖν θανεῖν σε πρὶν θανεῖν ποτέ.
 ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ x

NECESSITY

265 You speak aright; this now appears the truer thought.
 ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ - | - - ~ -

SELENE

266 Then what shall this unfolding action bring to pass?
 ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ x

EARTH

267 Each form of life transforms its shape throughout
 all time.
 - - ~ - | - - ~ - | - - ~ -

268 Dry land shall feed the trees, the beasts, the birds
 of air;
 - - ~ - | - - ~ - | - - ~ -

269 You shall behold their hands, their eyes, their speaking mouth:
 - - ~ - | - - ~ - | ~ - ~ -

270 A mind believing only it can know itself.
 - - ~ - | ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ ~

271 Is this the terror you spoke of in the days before,
 - - ~ - | ~ ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ -

272 Which you once said would one day spread through mortal kind?
 ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ - | - - ~ x

NECESSITY

273 Not yet; this only marks the birth of coming woes.
 - - ~ - | - - ~ - | ~ ~ ~ x

SELENE

274 What then, more fearful than life itself, will yet be born?
 - - ~ - | ~ ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ -

NECESSITY

275 To know full well that you shall die, before you die.
 ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ x

(σιγή.)

ΘΑΝΑΤΟΣ

276 τότε αὖ τὸ πρῶτον κρατῶ γένος βροτῶν ὅλον.
 ~ - ~ - | ~ ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ x

ΣΕΛΗΝΗ

277 σὺ δ' οὐ κρατεῖς τὸ πᾶν γένος βροτῶν νυνί;
 ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ x

ΘΑΝΑΤΟΣ

278 νῦν οὐδὲν ἄλλο πλὴν τὸ σῶμα λαμβάνω·
 -- ~ - | ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ x

279 φρενῶν κρατήσω, πρὶν βροτὸς δέμας λίπη.
 ~ - ~ - | -- ~ - | ~ - ~ x

ΓΑΙΑ

280 τί δῆτα δράσει ζῶον εἰδὸς ὡς θανεῖ;

ΑΝΑΓΚΗ

281 θεοὺς πλάσει κατ' εἰκόνας βροτῶν ὁ νοῦς.
 ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ x

ΑΝΑΓΚΗ

282 θεοὺς βροτὸς τεύξει γ' ὅταν θανεῖν μάθῃ.
 ~ - ~ - | -- ~ - | -- ~ -

283 θεοὺς; τίς ἂν θνητὸς θεοὺς πλάσαι θέλοι;
 ~ - ~ - | -- ~ - | -- ~ -

284 ὃς θνητὸς ὢν, θεοὺς ἀθανάτους ποθεῖ.
 -- ~ - | ~ - ~ - | -- ~ -

(silence.)

DEATH

276 Then I shall rule all creatures born into mortal life.
 ~ - ~ - | ~ ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ x

SELENE

277 Do you not rule the race of mortals even now?
 ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ x

DEATH

278 Now only mortal bodies fall beneath my rule;
 -- ~ - | ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ x

279 The mind of man I'll rule, before I take his flesh!
 ~ - ~ - | -- ~ - | ~ - ~ x

EARTH

280 Indeed, what will a creature do that knows it dies?
 -- ~ - | -- ~ - | ~ - ~ -

NECESSITY

281 The mind shall fashion gods in mortal form one day.
 ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ x

NECESSITY

282 Indeed, man shall make gods when first he learns of death.
 ~ - ~ - | -- ~ - | -- ~ -

SELENE

283 Ah, gods? What man would wish to bring new gods to birth?
 ~ - ~ - | -- ~ - | -- ~ -

NECESSITY

284 He who, since mortal, longs for the immortal life.
 -- ~ - | ~ - ~ - | -- ~ -

ΘΑΝΑΤΟΣ

285 φοβούμενος μείζον τεκεῖ ἐμοῦ κάμει.
 ~ - ~ - | - - ~ - | ~ - ~ ~

ΓΑΙΑ

286 τίς πρῶτος αὐτοῖς ἐν φρεσὶν φανήσεται;

(πῦρ ἀμυδρὸν ἐκ τοῦ βάθους ἀναφαίνεται.)

ΑΝΑΓΚΗ

287 ὁδ' ἐστίν, ὡς ἔοικεν· οὐπω δ' ὄνομα ἔχει.
 ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ - | - ~ ~ ~ -

ΣΕΛΗΝΗ

288 τίς οὗτος; ἀφανὴς γὰρ ὁμμασιν πέλει.
 - - ~ - | - - ~ - | - - ~ -

ΑΝΑΓΚΗ

289 οὐδ' ἔσχε μορφὴν μίαν ἐν χρόνῳ μακρῷ.

 - - ~ - | - - ~ - | ~ - ~ x

DEATH

285 From fear, he will beget one greater than me.
 ~ - ~ - | - - ~ - | ~ - ~ ~

EARTH

286 Which god shall first take shape within man's mortal mind?
 - - ~ - | - - ~ - | - - ~ -

(a dim fire appears from the depths.)

NECESSITY

287 This is the one, it seems; as yet he has no name now.
 ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ - | - ~ ~ ~ -

SELENE

288 And now, who is he? He remains unseen to eyes.
 - - ~ - | - - ~ - | - - ~ -

NECESSITY

289 He never kept one form throughout long ages past.
 - - ~ - | - - ~ - | ~ - ~ -

SELENE

290 A stranger comes to dwell among great gods on high.
 ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ - | - - ~ x

NECESSITY

291 No mortal yet regards him as a god at all;
 - - ~ - | ~ - ~ - | - - ~ x

292 A younger Titan; mortal men came after him.
 ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ x

293 The mortal race will name the gods in later times.
 ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ - | ~ - ~ x

EARTH

294 Now, let him tell me who he is—this stranger here.
